

It's been almost two months since I came to Riga (Latvia) and I'm already starting to feel like a local. Now I feel more comfortable in many issues that I had difficulties in when I first came, and I think that my prejudices have been broken. When I first landed in Riga, I thought the weather and people were cold.

I would like to thank my professors at the College of Law for breaking my stereotypes about people here. From the first moment we met, they treated us very warmly and helped us to adapt to Riga. I feel lucky in this regard because I think that we have received an education from professionals in the field and that we are students of a college with friendly and helpful people.

Riga amazes people with its history, architecture and nature. The fact that the city is green everywhere and intertwined with nature makes one feel very peaceful. It is a city with a perfect view, especially in autumn. I recommend to everyone to have a coffee by a lake in Latvia when the leaves are falling and the autumn wind is felt. Riga is not only a city with natural beauties, but also a city with very unique architectural and historical structures. You feel as if you are on a historical journey while taking a walk around the Old Town. Each street welcomes you with a different surprise and a different structure.

All of this makes Latvia beautiful for me. It is a country worth living in because of its history, nature, architecture, good educational institutions and helpful people.
